BOYS for BOYS

Linocuts and book by Hannes Steinert

In February this year, German artist Hannes Steinert turned 70. We will celebrate with a major retrospective exhibition of his many linocuts and, above all, the presentation of the new book "BOYS for BOYS".

In the 1980s, the norm prevailed that figurative work was not valued at art schools. Abstraction, and large oil paintings, were the norm. Many artists, past and present, used other, graphic techniques in a manageable format, easier to produce and thus easier to sell.

At the time, Café Jenseitz in Stuttgart organised small exhibitions. The basis for Hannes Steinert's later linocuts is immediately recognisable in the works he exhibited at Café Jenseitz at the time, which will also be on show at MooiMan gallery. These abstract figures developed into what can today be described as the typical Steinert figure: tall, slender, well-proportioned with generally striking genitals.

The exhibition features porcelain sculptures by German ceramicist Hendrik Schink and, for the first time, bronze sculptures by Flemish artist Marc De Corte. T-shirts were made from four of Hannes' works in a small edition.
